Living and working in Iceland
Moving to a new country takes courage. It also creates exciting opportunities and new beginnings. Taking the time to learn what to expect – and what is expected of you – will help you make the most of your opportunities. This brochure is intended to help you over the many hurdles faced when moving to a new country. This brochure answers the questions most frequently asked by those moving to Iceland. It focuses on employment and working life and aims at giving the basic facts and guiding you to the sources of accurate information.

Welcome to Iceland

This brochure deals with the following topics:

- Introduction to Iceland
- Working in Iceland
- Housing and cost of living
- Registering as a legal resident in Iceland
- Unemployment benefits and social security
- Education in Iceland
- Important Contact Information
The Republic of Iceland

Iceland is located in the North Atlantic, and is the second largest island in Europe, with an area of 103,000 square kilometres. About 75% of the land is more than 200 meters above sealevel with most of the land being high plateaus and mountains. Glaciers cover 11,200 square kilometres while suitable agricultural land only covers 1,400 square kilometres. Only the coastline is inhabited, and there are no inhabitants in the central highlands.

Climate

Contrary to popular belief, Iceland has rather mild, coastal weather. The average summer temperature in the capital Reykjavik, is 10.6°C/51°F in July. The highest recorded temperature in the capital area is 24.7°C/77°F. The average winter temperature in Reykjavik is about 0°C/32°F in January. A branch of the Gulf Stream flows along the southern and the western coast greatly moderating the climate. However, this brings mild air from the Atlantic which in contact with colder arctic air results in a climate that is marked by frequent changes in weather and and often strong wind. Furthermore this leads to more rainfall in the southern and western part than in the northern part of the island. During summer the nights are bright throughout Iceland and in June the sun in the north never fully goes down.

History

According to ancient written sources, the Norwegian chieftain Ingólfur Arnarson became the first permanent settler in Iceland in 874. Over the next centuries, people of Nordic and Gaelic origin settled in Iceland. Iceland went under the Norwegian king in 1262 and later the Danish king. Iceland became an independent democracy on June 17, 1944 and has a written constitution and a parliamentary form of government. The people of Iceland celebrate the 17th of June as their Independence Day. For ages Iceland was the poorest country in Europe and the population did not exceed 70.000 people. In the 20th century the industrial revolution finally found its way to Iceland with the industrialisation of the fishing fleet. In less than a century the Icelandic society has changed dramatically, now being one of richest countries in the world and a population of around 300.000 people. Today Iceland is a highly developed country, the world’s fifth and second in terms of gross domestic product (GDP) per capita and human development respectively. Iceland is a member of the UN, NATO, EEA, and OECD.

Government

According to Iceland’s constitution, the government is divided into 3 branches; the legislative, the judicial, and the executive branches. Althingi, where laws are made and amended, is the legislative branch. Executive branches, such as the ministries, directorates and various other government agencies, carry out laws. Judicial power lies with the Supreme Court and the district courts. The president is elected by direct popular vote for a term of 4 years, with no term limit. The president’s role is mostly ceremonial. Most executive power rests with the Government. Althingi is the legislative body of 63 members from 6 districts, elected for a term of 4 years by popular vote. Anyone who is eligible to vote can stand for parliament. A cabinet of ministers stays in power until the next general election or a new government is formed. There are currently eleven ministers and one prime minister. The ministers usually sit in Althingi.

Iceland has a universal suffrage, which means that every Icelandic citizen over eighteen can vote in the parliament election. Foreign nationals who have had legal residence in Iceland for five years can vote in local government elections. Danish, Finnish, Norwegian and Swedish citizens are though granted the right to vote after three years of residence. Only Icelandic citizens have the right to vote in national elections.

Language
Icelandic is one of the Nordic languages, resembles the Norse language as it was spoken centuries ago. While the majority of Icelanders speak more than one language, Icelandic is the official language and is used almost exclusively in all areas of daily life in Iceland. A large majority of Icelanders also speak English as a second language as well as Danish or another Scandinavian language. To a certain degree you can say that a fair knowledge of these languages is a precondition for many unskilled and technical jobs in Iceland, while knowledge of Icelandic is not necessarily required. Learning the Icelandic language gives you though a great advantage and enhances your chances to find a more interesting and better paid job. Information on where you can learn Icelandic follows later in this brochure.

Religion
Freedom of religion is guaranteed in Iceland by the Constitution. There is a State church, the Evangelical Lutheran Church, to which over 85% of the population belongs. Congregational activity in the capital is not strong and church attendance is low. Still the church plays a significant role in all major occasions in Icelander’s lives.

Driving in Iceland
People from the EEA who hold a valid, standardized European driver’s license are not required to exchange their license. Europeans without this type of standardized license must exchange theirs for an Icelandic license. In Iceland drivers are obliged by law to use headlights at all times day and night. Passengers in the front and back seats of automobiles are required by law to use safety belts. Be aware that outside the capital area driving conditions may be difficult. Large sections of highways are not paved and have a loose gravel surface.

For more information regarding driving in Iceland contact any tourist information centre in Iceland. There is information in English on the following websites: www.randburg.com, www.icetourist.is, www.travelnet.is.

Currency and banks
The unit of currency used in Iceland is the Krona, abbreviated ISK, the world’s smallest currency. At the time of writing this brochure 1€ = 82.5 ISK. You can check the rate of the ISK at: www.eures.is All banks will exchange the most common currencies and it is a good idea to exchange your currency as there are very few shops in Iceland that accept foreign currency. If the banks cannot exchange your currency it is likely that Forex can. Forex is located in the tourist information centre in Bankastræti 2, Reykjavik. Forex exchange rate is though usually less favourable than in the banks. Most shops and businesses accept all major credit cards. Credit and debit cards may even be used in taxis. Debit and credit cards are commonly used in Iceland even for very small transactions. After you find a job you will need a bank account for your day-to-day transactions as most employers deposit the pay checks directly. Most banks are open weekdays from 09:00-16:00 but some of them have branches with longer opening hours. To find a branch near you see: www.spar.is, www.glitnir.is, www.landsbanki.is or www.kaupthing.is

Time

Local time in Iceland is Greenwich Mean Time (GMT) all year round. So in Iceland the time is one hour later than Central European time during the winter, but two hours later in the summer time.

Keeping in touch with home

To call to Iceland - The country code for Iceland is 354. No area code is necessary as all domestic calls are local.
To call from Iceland - Dial 00 for an international line, then the country code followed by the area code and finally the phone number.
Sometimes the cheapest way to call abroad is to use an international calling card.
For more information and key figures about Iceland see www.mfa.is, www.island.is and www.iceland.is
The Icelandic economy is relatively small but growth and input have been sufficient to provide Icelanders with living standards that are among the highest in the world. In 2005 the economic growth in Iceland was 7.5% and the estimate for 2006 is 2.6%. Use of renewable natural resources such as the country’s rich fishing grounds and its hydro-electric and geothermal power capacity are the most important sources of export income. Diversification is though increasing with fast growing sectors including software and biotechnology industries, financial sector, tourism and the export of fisheries know-how. With a relatively young and well-educated work force, Iceland is increasingly complementing its natural resources with industries capitalising on human resources and technology.

The Icelandic labour market has for decades been characterised by constant demand for labour. The demand has been very high the last couple of years due to a booming economy, and the excess demand has mainly been met by workers from other EEA countries.

Although there is foreseeable some reduction in labour demand in the next months as the market will be adjusting after the up-swing of last years, we expect an ongoing demand for EEA workers in some sectors such as the constantly growing tourism sector, the health care sector, agriculture, fish industry, seasonal jobs in the meat industry as well as some jobs in the service industry. As the large energy and construction projects in East Iceland are coming to an end the need for construction workers will probably not be as great, though much will depend on the future construction of new hydroelectric power plants and other infrastructure projects. You can always see some of the available vacancies on the EURES websites: http://ec.europa.eu/eures/ or www.eures.is

If you are looking for work in a specific profession you can contact the EURES office and our advisers will help you get in contact with relevant companies.

A list of the most needed professions in the Icelandic labour market is regularly updated on our website: www.eures.is

Finding a job in Iceland

There are a number of ways to go about job searching, but it is a good idea to start looking for a job before you move to Iceland. Visiting the EURES Job Mobility Portal is a wise first step: www.eures.europa.eu – search for a job. The portal contains great variety of job opportunities. This website also contains general information on living and working in Iceland and information about the current situation on the labour market. You will find complementary and more specific information on the Icelandic EURES website www.eures.is. For all EURES job vacancies in Iceland, you are requested to fill out an online application form at www.vinnualastofnun.is/eures. Make sure you fill out the form as thoroughly as possible so it gives the most accurate description of you and your abilities. It’s important that you list all previous work experiences and education, both in your home country and abroad. It is vital that your contact information is accurate and telephone numbers and e-mail addresses active. The form must be filled out in English.

Please do not use ordinary mail as it is simply too slow.

When you have filled in and submitted the application form you are welcome to contact the Icelandic EURES advisers at eures@svm.is to discuss your job opportunities. Your local EURES adviser can also assist you. To find the EURES office nearest you go to: http://europa.eu.int/eures – EURES advisers.

By the experience of EURES IS, a job seeker from another EU/EEA country who speaks good English and has realistic expectations usually has a job within a few days.

Here are some other ways to job search in Iceland. For best results, you may wish to use all of the methods listed below.

Employment agencies [ráðningarþjónustur]: You may, free of charge, register with one or more private employment agencies. They will tell you what information you need to have readily available. For instance, a curriculum vitae/résumé, certificates, diplomas and references. Employment agencies are listed later in this brochure.

Read the [classified] advertisements in the local newspapers: The three largest papers in Iceland are Morgunblaðið (www.mbl.is), Fréttablaðið (www.visir.is) and Blaðið (www.vbl.is). The employment section (Atvinna) comes out on Sundays in Morgunblaðið and Fréttablaðið, but there are often daily advertisements. Sometimes it pays to put in your own advert for employment. Note that almost all job advertisements are in Icelandic.

Phoning and visiting: If you know what kind of business you want to work for you may want to call them directly or visit them and ask if there are any jobs available. EURES can also help you to find the suitable enterprises.

Contact local branch of your professional or trade union [stéttarfélag, verkalýðsfélag]: They have information on the current employment trends within your profession and can give advice on where to start looking.
Contacts: Tell everyone you know in Iceland that you are looking for employment. Word-of-mouth via family and friends often gives good results.

Are your diplomas valid in Iceland?
Before travelling to Iceland, it is wise to find out which jobs are open for persons with your qualifications. You can also have your diploma[s] assessed for equivalence and recognition in Iceland. The basic principle is that valid qualifications to practice a certain profession in your homeland are also valid in other EU/EEA countries. Higher degrees, 3 years of studies [BA, BSc, BS] and vocational studies with a secondary school education, should be recognized all over the EU/EEA.

The Ministry of Education, Science and Culture is responsible for coordination of recognition procedures in Iceland. The Ministry does not process all applications for recognition. Individual ministries handle the recognition for their respective spheres, for instance the Ministry of Health is responsible for recognition for medical and health professions. The best place to begin collecting the information you will need is this website: www.menntagatt.is An assessment of equivalence of your diplomas will make it easier for Icelandic employers to evaluate your knowledge and skills. It may also help you to get a better job with higher pay. However, lack of Icelandic language skills will limit your options considerably.

Europass
Europass is a standard folder that helps people to make their skills and qualifications clearly and easily understood around Europe. Europass consists of five documents: two documents (Europass curriculum vitae (CV) and Europass Language Passport) you can fill in yourself; and three other documents (Europass Certificate Supplement, Europass Diploma Supplement and Europass Mobility) filled in and issued by competent organizations. Europass is supported by a network of National Europass Centres. You can find more information about Europass and your local Europass Centre at: http://europass.cedefop.europa.eu/ and there is a link to the Europass office at www.eures.is

Curriculum Vitae or Résumé
In Iceland the usual practice is to enclose a resume/CV with your job application. The CV should preferably fill just a single page. Most people attach a photo, and while that is optional it may help. While the details provided in CVs vary a great deal here is a list of the information that should be included. The information should be in reverse chronological order (most recent information first).

Personal details - name, address, telephone numbers, e-mail address, date of birth and marital status.

Education - this section contains your formal qualification. It should include when you studied, the name of the school, degree, and in what area your degree is.

Work experience – this is a very important part of your resume. Include a brief description of each job/position, name of the company and when you worked there.

Other qualifications – here you should mention your language skills; spoken and written. You can also describe you computer skills and other relevant qualifications.

Positions of trust/personal interests – describe in a few lines non-professional interests and leisure activities. If you have lived abroad by all means mention it here.

References – it is very important to name at least two people that will give you a good referral. State the names, job title, telephone numbers and e-mails for these individuals. Contact your referrals and make sure you have their approval.

Cover Letter

When you send in a job application or a CV you should also include a cover letter. The letter should not be longer than one page. Your cover letter is an important marketing tool which highlights your most attractive qualifications as a potential employee. While you may use the same CV for every job you are applying for you should write a different cover letter for each job you apply for. Consider the following when writing the letter:

- If you are responding to an advertisement be sure to read it carefully, and make sure you respond to what it asks for.
- Explain why you want this particular job.
- Make it clear to the recipient that you are familiar with the company, the required qualifications and furthermore, how you satisfy these.

The Job Interview

Most Icelandic employers using the EURES service make their recruitment decisions after some telephone conversations and e-mail correspondence with the applicants. For those that are already in Iceland when job hunting the norm is to be called in for an interview. Whether you are interviewed in person, over the phone or by e-mail, the interview provides a good opportunity to ask questions concerning aspects of the job. It is a good idea to acquaint you with the company and its practices to be better prepared in the job interview.
The Job Application
For most unskilled and blue collar jobs, employers in Iceland use standardized application form to screen potential employees. You find these application forms on the job agencies’ websites. They are only available in Icelandic except the EURES application form www.vinnumalastofnun.is/eures Employers use the application to determine who they are going to call for a job interview so you should be careful to fill it out correctly. Answer all the questions briefly and honestly. Tailor information about your past training and job experience to fit the job you are applying for. Finally, read it over before submitting.

Please note that most of the information that these web pages provide are only available in Icelandic.
Everyone working in Iceland must pay taxes. The taxation system in Iceland is a PAYE system (Pay-As-You-Earn). Employers are required to calculate and deduct taxes from all salaries and wages paid out to employees. There is one main income tax bracket which in 2007 is 35.72%. All those with a tax card are entitled to a personal tax credit of 32,150 ISK per month. This means that usually about 27% of your wages goes to taxes after the personal discount. Income under the limit of 90,006 ISK a month is free of income tax. The Internal Revenue (Ríkisskattstjóri), issues tax cards. Applicants must have an identification number (kennitala), and be prepared to show personal identification with a picture. In order to have the right amount of tax deducted, you have to give your employer your tax card. To receive a tax card go to your local or inland tax office. You find their addresses at www.rsk.is > International > Addresses

Example showing how tax is calculated

Salary for one month .................. 150,000
4% deduction of pensions premium ............ 6,000
Taxable income.......................... 144,000
Tax rate 35.72% x 144,000 ........ 51,432
Personal tax credit ....................... 32,150
Withholding tax......................... 19,287

Withholding tax ....................... 124,713

If you work on a farm, room and board is a part of your salary and is also subject to taxes. Other deductions from your salary are union dues 1% and pension premium 4% (the employer then pays an extra 6% to your pension fund).

For every year you work in Iceland you must fill out and submit a tax return. It is usually due in March each year. When leaving Iceland you are also expected to send an income report to the tax authorities a week before you leave. This is done because your final taxes must be calculated, in some cases there may be a partial refund. Final assessment takes place on the basis of the tax return in the end of July the year following the tax year. If your withholding tax was higher than your assessment you will get a refund, and if you did not pay enough you must pay the difference. If you have an agent in Iceland who can claim your tax refund or pay for you the residue, he must have a written permit from you to receive the payment. If you do not turn in a tax return, the tax authorities estimate your income and tax you accordingly. This estiinformation is usually high and can cost you dearly. To avoid a bill from the Icelandic tax authorities later on when you have returned home make sure your tax return is sufficient. Most people now do their tax return on-line and it is quite simple as many numbers are filled in advance by the authorities. Instructions are also available in many languages on the Internal Revenue webpage: www.rsk.is > international
Those who need assistance with understanding or completing their tax return should contact their trade union or the Intercul-tural house. It is also possible to speak to the local tax authority or the Internal Revenue Directorate (Laugavegur 166, Rvk). You can also seek the help of registered auditors (many Icelanders do so) but keep in mind that you need to pay for this service.

Workers rights and labour laws
In Iceland the collective agreements between unions and employer’s associations are generally binding, which means that they also apply to non-union members. 90% of the labour market is covered by collective agreements. Wages and other terms of employment concluded in collective agreements are minimum terms. Salaries lower than what is stated in the collective agreement are illegal. The minimum wage depends on both education and work experience, e.g. the minimum wage for a qualified and experienced carpenter is much higher than for an unskilled worker. Therefore make sure that you have all papers on your education and/or work experience and that you are getting paid accordingly. You can find a link to your union where you find further information on terms of employment at www.asi.is
The common practice is though that people negotiate individually with their future employers about their salaries and other terms of recruitment, these wages are called market wages. Most Icelandic people that work in the private sector earn closer to market wages than the union rates. According to the union rates the minimum salary for unskilled worker is 119,752 (1,413 €) ISK per month for full time job. The difference between union rates and market salaries can range from 30% up to 60%. Most unskilled jobs offered by EURES in Iceland are paid according to union rates. Learning the Icelandic language substantially increases your career options and earning possibilities.

- Contract of Employment –Workers are entitled to a written job contract no later than two months after first day of employment. A verbal contract is legally binding the first two months. The contract should include the type and place of work, the hours, a short job description, wages, vacation pay, paydays, and the job ratios. It is illegal to work without a contract.

- Pay Statement (payslips) – Collective agreements require that payment of wages must be accompanied with a written pay statement (payslip). Here is an example how a payslip should look like:

- Periods of rest - Workers are entitled to a minimum consecutive period of 11 hours of rest during each 24-hour period and at least one day of rest per week immediately succeeding the daily minimum period of rest.

- Holiday allowance (orlofslaun) - The general rule is that you are entitled to two vacation days for each month worked. In all wage contracts, there is a clause concerning holiday allowance. The holiday allowance should be calculated at the time of each wage payment, with a minimum of 10,17% of total wages. The holiday allowance enables you to go on holiday and still receive your regular salaries. When working on a temporarily basis though, the holiday allowance is often paid out directly with your monthly salaries.

- Weekly day off – For every seven day period a worker shall have at least one day off from work, which is directly connected to the daily rest.

- Pension Funds – In Iceland it is mandatory to pay to a pension fund. The employee pays a percentage (4%) and the employer must also pay a percentage (6%). Pension funds are transferable between EEA countries. For information regarding Pension funds visit: www.ii.is

- Compensation for accidents occurring while on the job - Insurance against occupational injury covers employed persons working in Iceland. The occupational injury insurance covers accidents in the course of work. For further information see: www.tr.is/media/erlend-mal/English.pdf
• Absence from work due to sickness. - Worker who is unable to perform his normal duties due to sickness or accidents is entitled to wages for a limited period of time. The minimum rights are two paid days a month.

• Termination of Employment. - The Icelandic labour market is flexible when it comes to recruiting and laying off staff. Both employers and worker are though subject to notice periods. The notice periods vary between unions and also depend on the length of employment. The general rule is that if you have worked less than three months the notice is one week, a month if you have worked for 3-6 months and 3 months if you have worked for longer than 6 months. Termination should always be accompanied by a written letter. Your union can give you more detailed information about their notice period rules. You find their addresses on: www.asi.is/desktopdefault.aspx/tabid-7/24_read-30

• Public holidays – There are 15 public holidays in Iceland. They are called “red days” as they are marked in red on Icelandic calendars.

For more information about labour laws contact the Icelandic Federation of Labour at www.asi.is. The federation has published brochures about workers’ rights in 9 languages. These brochures as well as ASI.s handbook, “Icelandic Labour Law, A Summary of Basic Rights and Obligations on the Private Labour Market” can also be found on www.eures.is

Don’t forget:

✔ To save all your pay slips and to make copies of your time card.

✔ That your union contract only insures your minimum rights.

✔ To request membership in your union in writing. Just because you are paying dues doesn’t always mean that you are enrolled.

✔ That your Union membership entitles you all kinds of service from the unions, such as legal assistance in labour disputes, vacation housing, reimbursements for language classes, professional training, and discounted prices at sports clubs.

✔ To carefully check your pay slip and ask your colleagues in case something is unclear to you. You can also visit the EURES office or the Intercultural house if you need further help.

✔ Do not hesitate to ask questions regarding your rights. While it is of course best to secure housing or accommodation before you move to Iceland this may not always be possible. If you need a temporary accommodation during your first days in Iceland, a guesthouse or youth hostel may be the best short term solution while you are looking for a more permanent housing. The cheapest option is the Youth Hostel (Farfuglaheimilið), Sundlaugavegur 34, 105 Reykjavík. Tel: (354) 553 8110. For a listing of hotels and guesthouses in Iceland go to: www.gisting.is

Rental Housing
The Icelandic market for privately owned homes and apartment flats is large, around 75-85% of the housing stock. The market for rentals is, therefore, limited. Rent in Reykjavík and the capital area is generally more expensive than in other areas. To find an apartment you may want to use all of the tips below.

- Advertise in the newspapers – for a small fee you may place an ad stating that you are looking for a rental.

- Use the internet – The following websites that are connected to the newspapers have listings that are updated daily. These ads are all in Icelandic. Look for húsnæði í boði on the following sites: www.visir.is, www.mbl.is, and www.vbl.is.

- Word-of-mouth – Tell everyone you know, even people you work with that you are looking for an apartment. Often apartments for rent are not advertised in the papers as they are rented through acquaintances before people get the chance to advertise them.

- Use the rental agency Leigulistinn - In exchange for a monthly fee of 2.850 IKR this agency provides their customers with a current list of all available housing for rent. Call everyday and ask if there are any new listings. Leigu-listinn, Skipholt 50b, 105 Reykjavík, 511 1600, www.leigulistinn.is

- Put up advertisements – you may put up an ads saying that you are looking to rent a flat on billboards of supermarkets, local kiosks, universities, community centres, health care clinics and any other public notice boards.

When renting a house or flat it is usual to pay a month in advance and a security deposit. You should always have a written, signed lease. For more information on leases or to print out a lease in English, Polish or Icelandic, go to http://eng.felagsmalaraduneyti.is/forms/
Rent Subsidies (Húsaleigubætur)

All those who are renting a flat, have signed a lease for at least 6 months, and are at least 18 years of age may apply for compensation. Application forms are in the reception areas of your local Social Services Office (Félagsþjónustan). Each application is valid for one year, therefore, applications must be renewed annually. There is social Service in all municipalities in Iceland and several offices in Reykjavik. For information about your Social Service office please call 411-1600.

Note: If you rent in an industrial complex or some other form of housing that is not legal as a residential area you will NOT receive rent subsidies.

Buying a Flat

All those who have a residence permit may buy a flat in Iceland. For more information on purchasing a home contact your bank or the Housing Finance Fund (Íbúðalánasjóður). Their web site currently has information in English, Polish, Serbian, Croatian and Danish.

What should you bring with you?

- A valid passport, which does not expire for at least 3 months past the period that you want to stay.
- Documents for transferring your health and social security rights. The E-104 certificate for health and sickness insurance if you are here for employment, or your European Health Insurance card if you come as a tourist as it is only valid for short term stay.
- Diplomas and certificates proofing your education and/or vocational training. It is a good idea to translate your documents into English and/or Icelandic before coming to Iceland.
- Have your former employers or colleagues write references for you. The references need to be in English and/or Icelandic.
- Contact your local social security service and tax office to find out how working in Iceland will affect your status regarding taxes and benefits, and be sure to obtain the appropriate forms and certificates.
- Sufficient funds to get you started until your first salary. For instance money for accommodation, rent deposits, food, application processing fees for residence permit etc. (be aware that pay day is usually the first day of the month so it may be a while until your first pay check).
- Enough money for a return ticket in case you decide not to stay in Iceland or you don’t find a suitable job in Iceland.
- The E-301 form in case you happen to get unemployed after working for some time in Iceland.
A citizen of an EEA/EU country (except for Romania and Bulgaria) may stay and work in Iceland for up to three months from arriving in the country, or stay for up to six months if seeking employment. If you intend to stay longer than three months you must apply for a residence permit. It is recommended that you do so directly after arrival in Iceland. The conditions for receiving a resident permit for an EEA citizen are that you can provide for yourself.

To apply for a residence permit go to The Directorate of Immigration (Útlendingastofnun) located at Skógarhlíð 6, 105 Reykjavík. You can also print out the application form and find related information at www.utl.is. In addition Swiss nationals can work in Iceland without a work permit. All EEA/EU citizens are free to set up a business in Iceland.

The 30 EEA countries are:

Austria
Belgium
Cyprus
Czech Republic
Denmark
Estonia
Finland
France
Germany
Greece
Hungary
Iceland
Ireland

United Kingdom (Bulgaria and Rumenia)

1 *The Icelandic government has decided to apply temporary restrictions for citizens from Bulgaria and Romania. The restrictions will be in effect at least till 1st of January 2009. This means that Bulgarian and Romanian citizens need work permit to work in Iceland.
When you apply for a residence permit, you will need to submit the following:

- A completed application form for a residence permit signed by the applicant.
- A valid passport, the validity of the passport must extend at least three months beyond the expected stay in Iceland.
- 1 passport-size photo
- Your kennitala (Icelandic Personal ID Number)
- Verification of employment – a copy of your signed contract of employment. This should include the duration of the contract and whether this is full or part-time employment.
- You will be asked to present proof of health insurance. This is done with an E-104 certificate issued from your home country. If you are not eligible for this insurance you may purchase a 6 month health insurance package at most private insurance companies in Iceland.
- Confirmation of school admission when applying for a residence permit for the purpose of studying.
- Certificate of custody when applying for a child younger than 18.

When the application has been processed, the applicant will be informed by a written notification. The average processing time is about 60 days. The fee for a first permit of a person over the age of 18 is 4000 ISK and 2000 ISK for persons under the age of 18. Your application will not be processed until it has been paid for.

A first-time residence permit for an EEA/EU foreigner is usually issued for five years. However, if the job contract is for longer than three months, but shorter than one year, the permit is issued for the corresponding period. A first-time permit for a dependant family member of an EEA/EU foreigner will be issued for the same period of time as the wage-earner's permit.

EEA citizens do not need a work permit. Non-EEA citizens married to EEA citizens may also move to Iceland, but must apply for a work permit.

Residence Permits for Children under 18

Only legal parents or guardians may apply for children under 18 years of age. When applying for a residence permit for a child under 18, the applying parent or guardian must show proof of housing that meets requirements concerning the number of individuals in residence. The parent needs to show sufficient income to provide for himself and the child. A parent who applies for a residence permit for a child needs to earn at least 82,015 ISK per month. Couples need to earn 150,152 ISK per month.

Children born in Iceland

Children of foreign citizens born in Iceland do not automatically receive a residence permit; this needs to be applied for after the birth of the child. It is very important to do this, especially in cases where the child is taken out of the country, e.g. on summer vacation to the parents country of origin. Children who have not attained citizenship must have a residence permit in order to re-enter the Schengen area.
What should I do first after entering Iceland?

1. Visit the EURES office: www.eures.is
   - there you get help and advice on finding a job and apartment, applying for an ID number (kennitala) and other necessary formalities

2. When you have found a job:
   - Sign a contract of employment (see example on www.eures.is).
   - After receiving a kennitala you can open a bank account.
   - Apply for a tax card.
   - Apply for a residence permit.
   - Make sure that you know your rights. For instance are you being paid the correct wage?

3. When you find an apartment or place to live be sure and fill out a change of address form at the national Registry: www.thjodskra.is

If at any time you need help or information contact the EURES office (www.eures.is) or the Intercultural Centre/Alþjóðahús (www.ahus.is)

YOU MUST RENEW YOUR RESIDENCE PERMITS BEFORE THEY EXPIRE.
The Kennitala (ID number)

All people born in Iceland and all people legally residing in Iceland are issued an Icelandic personal identification number. This number, kennitala, is issued by the National Registry (Þjóðskrá). This personal ID number is a ten digit number. The kennitala is very important in Iceland and is widely used to identify people, for instance it is necessary for health care, banking, enrolling in schools, and even renting videos.

The kennitala is your identity number. Your kennitala is connected to you and all your personal information such as, your correct name, your legal address, your age, and your civil status.

Only an institution, business or employer may apply for your kennitala. Usually employers apply for kennitala on behalf of their employees. If you have not yet found a job the EURES office can help you apply for a kennitala.

Whenever you move back to your native country or change address, you must notify the National Registry by filling out the proper forms. All personal information connected to the kennitala is guarded by strict laws, regulated by the Data Protection Authority in Iceland.

Unemployment benefits and social security

Unemployment
Persons aged 16-70 years are entitled to unemployment benefits if they have been working legally for at least 3 months in Iceland. The premium to the unemployment insurance Fund is paid by your employer (Employers’ contribution, Tryggingagjald). You are entitled to unemployment benefits if you are:

- unemployed
- living in Iceland (have a residence permit or are a citizen of one of the Nordic countries).
- have worked legally for at least 3 months during the last 12 months
- actively seeking a job
- capable of working and willing to take all general job offers

If you have worked in Iceland for three months in at least 25% position you have earned the right to minimum benefits, which entitles you to ¼ of the basic rate. With the E-301 form which is a statement of your work periods in your home country/other EEA country, you can transfer your rights to unemployment and thus become eligible to full benefits, given that you have worked full time for 12 months. It is therefore wise to take with you an E-301 form when coming to work in Iceland. From 1 July 2006 the basic rate of unemployment benefit is 111,015 ISK per month. On top of that you can get income based benefits for three months. It will be 70% of your average wages last six months, though no more than 185,400 ISK per month.

If you are unemployed and receiving benefits in your home country you can come to Iceland to search for a job on benefits from your home country for up to three months. To transfer your benefits you must obtain an E-303 form at your local employment service. In the same way people who receive unemployment benefits in Iceland can apply for E-303 to search for work elsewhere in the EEA.

For more information visit: www.vinnumalastofnun.is or www.eures.is

Social Security
Before moving to Iceland you should contact the social security agency or health insurance programme where you were insured prior to your arrival to Iceland to obtain an E-104 form. The form will ensure you health insurance coverage in Iceland immediately on the transfer of residence. If you intend to stay for longer than three months in Iceland you need to apply for a residence permit from the Directorate of Immigration and submit an E-104 certificate to the SSSI (State Social Security Institute, Tryggingastofnun) as soon as possible. The SSSI then issues a certificate of health in-
A citizen of an EEA State who does not possess a residence permit, and is therefore not registered as resident in Iceland, cannot enjoy health insurance coverage. In order to secure health insurance at the start of employment, the best course is to apply for and obtain a residence permit before coming to Iceland. (Further information on residence permit visit: www.utl.is)

Private insurance companies cannot issue E-certificates. Persons insured by private insurance companies are granted health insurance coverage only after 6 months’ residence. If you don’t intend to stay for longer than three months you should bring with you the European Health Insurance Card. That ensures you health insurance coverage on a temporary stay up to three months.

Those who are covered by social security in Iceland are intitled to various benefits like hospitalization, general medical assistance by physicians and specialists, home nursing, x-ray exams, per diem sickness benefits, physiotherapy, medications, dental treatment for children, occupational injury insurance, invalidity pensions, old-age pensions, death grants and child pensions.

Employees who are temporarily posted in Iceland by their employers can continue to enjoy coverage under the public health insurance scheme of their home countries, subject to certain conditions, with all the applicable rights and obligations. Such employees can apply for an E-101 certificate from the insurance agency in the home country, together with an E-106/European health insurance card. This applies also to self-employed persons. The certificates need to be presented to the SSSI for registration.

For further information please consult the SSSI website, www.tr.is.

a leave for up to 9 months; each parent has a three months period exclusively to his/her disposal and the three months left the parents can arrange between themselves at their own convenience. Payments from the Parental Leave Fund are dependent on your average salaries the past two tax years. Benefits during parental leave are 80% of you past salaries, though never less than 100.604 ISK\(^1\) a month given you have been working 50% or more. The benefits never exceed 518.600 ISK a month. Persons who have had residence in Iceland for 12 consecutive months, but have been outside the labour market or studying are also entitled to certain minimum payments following the birth of a child. Full time students are entitled to 98.209 ISK a month and people inactive or in less than 25% job are entitled to 43.899 ISK. The Directorate of Labour administers the payments from the Parental Leave Fund.

\(^1\) All amounts apply to year 2007.
Occupational Injury Insurance
If you get injured in the course of work, such injury is normally covered by occupational injury insurance. The same amount applies to all persons and is decided by law. Invalidity pensions and death grants in respect of accidents are paid, as are child pensions. Also, medical and medicinal costs etc., already paid by the injured person are reimbursed. Those who have so requested in their tax returns are also insured against injury sustained during housework. Further information can be found at: www.tr.is/media/erlend-mal/English.pdf

Health Care
Iceland is divided into health care regions, each with their own primary health care centres, some of which are run jointly with the local community hospital. The primary health care centres have the responsibility for general treatment and care, examination, home nursing as well as preventive measures such as family planning, maternity care and child health care and school health care. This service is open to all regardless of availability and regardless of insurance. Those that can not show proof of insurance will pay higher fees. To find the health care centre closest to your home look for “Heilsgæslustöð” in the phonebook. If you are in the capital area you can also find the information at http://www.heilsugaeslan.is/?PageID=14

For medical problems that arise after the closing time of the health care centres you can use a service called “Læknavakt”, located at Smártorgi 1, Kópavogur, tel. 1770 or you can call 8482600 if you are closer to Akureyri. Læknavakt is open on a walk-in basis from 17:00-23:30 weekdays, and from 09:00-23:30 on weekends and holidays.

Emergency services
Emergency and trauma services (Slysa- og bráðamóttaka) are located at the National University Hospital (Landspítali-háskólasjúkræðahús) at Fossvogur. Located in 108 Reykjavík, just off Bústaðavegur.

If you are not sure if your injury is an emergency you may call the hospital at 543 2000 and ask them for advice. If you need immediate assistance or an ambulance then call 112. Be prepared to state your name, what the problem is and your location.

*According to recent laws concerning patients’ rights, individuals who are covered under national health insurance, who do not speak Icelandic as their first language or mother tongue are entitled to an interpreter at no charge to themselves. If you want an interpreter be sure to request it. Also be sure to say what language/dialect you speak.

A fundamental principle of Icelandic education is that everyone should have equal opportunities to acquire an education, regardless of sex, economic status, residential location, religion, possible handicaps, and cultural, social or ethnic background.

The education system is divided into four levels:

Pre-school (leikskóli) - for children between the ages of 2 and 6.

Primary school (grunnskóli) - 6-16 years of age.

Upper-secondary school (framhaldsskóli) - For those who are 16-20 years of age or anyone that has completed compulsory education or has turned 18 years of age.

Higher education or university (háskóli) – For those that have completed upper-secondary school and have a matriculation examination “stúdentspróf” or equivalent.

Pre-schools

You can apply for a pre-school placement for your child when the child is 6 months old. Applications can be found at the pre-schools, the pre-school head office at Tryggvagata 17 or online at http://rafræn.reykjavik.is/pages/umsoknumleikskola/ Parents pay a monthly fee to have their child in pre-school. Pre-schools are to be available to all children who have not reached compulsory school age. Very few pre-schools accept children less than one year old, and the youngest children are usually 2 years of age, although there are some exceptions. In municipalities where there may be insufficient room to accommodate all applicants, the children of single parents and students are often given priority. Until get your child placed in a pre-school you can find a day care mother (dagmóðir). Day care mothers take care of children in their own homes and this service is administered by the social services of the local municipal authority.

For more information go to your local pre-school, your local service centre or contact the main office in your community. Information about pre-schools for parents of foreign origin is also available on: www.reykjavik.is/desktopdefault.aspx/tabid-1492

Primary School
Primary school is compulsory and free of charge. According to Icelandic law all students with a different mother tongue than Icelandic have the right to two hours a week of special teaching in Icelandic while they are getting a grasp of the language as the language of instruction is Icelandic. In some areas of the country there are reception schools (móttökudeild). In Reykjavík these schools offer one-year classes for students from 9 – 15 years of age, who do not have enough knowledge of Icelandic to enable them to attend regular classes. After this students may attend their local school where they may still receive extra help if needed. For more information about these special reception schools contact your local school office or social services in your neighbourhood.

Information brochure on elementary schools for parents of foreign origin is available in many languages:
www.reykjavik.is/desktopdefault.aspx/tabid-1493

Upper secondary schools
Education at the upper-secondary level is free but students pay a registration fee and the cost of textbooks. Students in vocational education also pay a materials fee. Education at this level is not compulsory but around 90% of all students continue to upper-secondary school. After matriculation examination (studentsprof) they have the right to enter university. There are about 40 upper-secondary schools in Iceland. There are no student loans available for students in Upper secondary schools. There is however tax discounts available to parents. This discount is not automatic like child benefits. Parents must fill out the appropriate information on their tax forms. The amount of the discount is affected by any income that the student claims. For more information about this call the tax office (Ríkisskattstjóri, Laugavegi 166) at 563 1100 or check their homepage at www.rsk.is. Parents are obligated by law to financially support their children until they are 18 years of age. Students between the ages of 18-20 years old who are studying or learning a trade may apply for an extension of support. The student makes this request at the SSSI.
